Rob Goodall Bio

For nearly twenty-five years Rob Goodall has made adult education and organizational development his profession. After working for a number of years at University Hospital and the BC Health Association, Rob started an independent management consulting practice in July 1993. Since then, clients have asked him to take on a number of projects including leadership training, quality improvement workshops, teambuilding, facilitation and governance education for non-profit boards.

Rob is also on faculty (part-time) with Royal Roads University, teaching in a number of graduate level programs in leadership, teamwork, systems thinking and change management, including the Master of Arts in Leadership and Training (MALT). Rob has a Master's degree in Political Science from the University of British Columbia, and completed three years of further post-graduate study at York University, Toronto. Rob also received a Professional Teaching Certificate from Simon Fraser University in 1975, and worked as a schoolteacher, administrator and adult educator before starting his own consulting practice.
